Browsers recognize five ___ font groups

If you've ever paid even a little attention to the appearance of typed letters, you're noticing various fonts. Different computer fonts have names, and you can identify them by their features. Start by learning more about fonts and how to distinguish them.What Is a Font?Put simply, a font is a stylized typeface. A specific font comprises letters, numbers and symbols that all feature the same defining graphical embellishments or style. Fonts can enhance documents or websites. Different tones and applications demand different types of fonts to match or coordinate. Fonts vary in their design, weight and point size. You may wish to vary fonts depending on the purpose of the text. For example, when you want to enhance readability, you'll want to choose a simpler font. If you're trying to create a specific tone in a website or document, such as old-fashioned or fancy, you can choose a font that evokes these tones with its stylistic details.Identify a Font by CharacteristicsYou can identify a font in several ways. Fonts tend to have key features that place them into specific groups. For example, fonts with serifs have spikes and slabs at the ends of their lines. Fonts without these spikes or slabs are known as sans-serif fonts.Check these features of a font to identify it. Note the point to which the uppercase "J" descends, whether it sits on the baseline or goes under it. Look at the dollar sign in a font to see if it has a single line or a double line going down through the "S." Some dollar signs have lines that don't cross the "S." Look at the uppercase "Q" to see whether the tail crosses into the circle, touches it or sits below it. Check the uppercase "G" to see what the foot looks like and whether it's pointing down or forward. Notice whether the number "4" is open or closed at the top. Check the ampersand to see whether it looks traditional, closed, open or like an "Et" that's open or with a gap. Notice whether the uppercase "M" has a center vertex that touches the baseline or is above the baseline. Check to see if the center bar of the uppercase "P" touches the vertical line or crosses it. Find out if the uppercase "U" has a stem. Look at the lowercase "f" to see if it has upper and lower loops or an upper or lower only.Use a Free Font IdentifierTake a screenshot or a picture of a font you like and upload it to a free font identifier online. Simply upload the image in either JPG or PNG format, agree to terms of service and click a button to have the identifier scan the image and choose a font that matches the appearance.Find the Designer or PublisherIf you can find the designer or publisher of a font, you may be able to use a font identifier to figure out the specific font. Enter the name of the designer or publisher into the search field and click "go." You'll get a list of fonts produced by the designer. This can enable you to identify the font in question.Search for Fonts by SimilarityIf you know the font you want to identify is similar to another font, you can search for fonts by similarity. For example, if you're looking for a font that's similar to "Boho a Gogo," enter this name into the search tool. You can then get a list of fonts that have similar styles, sizes and lines, such as "Dazzle," "Stripes" and "Radial." Have any question? To render a document,the device displaying the page needs a style sheet that specifies the appearance of each page element.In every version of CSS,you apply a style rule containing a list of style properties to an element or a group of elements known as a selector.One advantage of user-defined style sheets is that they make the Web more accessible to visually impaired users who may require larger fonts or the absence of clashing color schemes.The exact order in which external style sheets and embedded style sheets are processed by the browser depends on the order in which they are listed within the HTML file.Answer:Unlock to view answerThe first style sheet interpreted by the browser is the one built in to the browser itself.Answer:Unlock to view answerStyles set by the author of a Web page and stored in an internal style sheet are loaded after internal and user-defined style sheets.Answer:Unlock to view answerAnother type of style sheet created by a Web page author is an embedded style sheet, in which the styles are inserted directly within the body element of an HTML document.Answer:Unlock to view answerStyle sheets cannot be as long and complicated as HTML files.Answer:Unlock to view answerA color value is an alphabetic expression that describes the properties of a color.Answer:Unlock to view answerCSS also allows RGB values to be entered as hexadecimal numbers.Answer:Unlock to view answerSaturation measures the intensity of the chosen color and ranges from 0% (no color)up to 100% (full color).Answer:Unlock to view answerWeb pages are unstructured documents in which elements are nested within other elements, forming a hierarchy of elements.Answer:Unlock to view answerA generic font describes the general appearance of a typeface,but does not rely on a specific font definition.Answer:Unlock to view answerAbsolute measurements are appropriate when you know the physical properties of an output device and want to fix a size to a specific value.Answer:Unlock to view answerThe subscript and superscript styles lower or raise text vertically,as well as resize it.Answer:Unlock to view answerList style types can be used with contextual selectors to create an outline style based on nested lists.Answer:Unlock to view answerBy default,browsers offset ordered and unordered lists from the surrounding text.Answer:Unlock to view answerLinks that are underlined or highlighted only when the mouse pointer hovers over the linked text display what is known as the hover over effect.Answer:Unlock to view answerWithout underlines,there is no visual clue that the links in the navigation list act as hypertext.Answer:Unlock to view answerGood management skills are as crucial to good Web design as a well-chosen color or typeface.Answer:Unlock to view answer
